Standard Oil University Declares It Needs Thirteen More New Buildings.

Special to the Eagle.

Chicago, April 7.—Thirteen new buildings and additional endowments are needed immediately at the University of Chicago, according to statements made by President Harry P. Judson in his annual report issued yesterday. New departments, including a faculty of medicine and a medical school plant are other wants listed by President Judson in his comparative statement on the future expansion of the university.

His plans for enlarging the university will increase the big institution almost one-half, the university buildings now numbering thirty and representing $4,369,805 investments. The endowment of the university amounts to $13,750,317, while the general balance sheet of the school shows a total of $25,990,103.

President Judson reiterated his intention to drop "undesirable" students from the rolls, saying:

"The university has no need of a large number of students. It wants those of high quality and serious purpose, but no others."

The fact that threats of expulsion for poor work are not idle ones was impressed yesterday when Dean Robert M. Lovett, of the junior colleges, announced the dismissal of thirteen students whose recent educational efforts have been below standard.

College Station, Tex., April 6.
